Browser Safety – No more security and privacy problems. Okay, with all that out of the way, lets get straight to the point. Internet Explorer, the former king of the hill, has been losing market share for years now, largely because people have started migrating to less-hazardous browsers such as Firefox. Internet Explorer, though for years it was the de facto choice for many people in the world, has had its share of data loss/corruption due to security issues. A browser designed for the Internet is not necessarily safe from all kinds of unsafeness. This is something we've all learned over the years. It's been a number of years since Firefox was the default browser in Windows, but it still doesn't get enough credit. …Download Teredo Tunneling Teredo was already there, but Teredo Tunneling Protocol (TT) isn't exactly new… but it's pretty new to many people. TT, in short, is a protocol that allows you to have a "tunnel" through all IP-based services in your LAN and access all the services (and data) on the other side. For example, if you are connected to the Internet via a university's network, you can still use Firefox even if the network is down because TT will let you access the Internet. …The rDNS function of Netlogon has been disabled, causing hundreds of servers worldwide to fail to connect to domain controllers. The bug has been there for as long as 3 years, but Microsoft only recently acknowledged it. However,
